Book Author: H.G.

Wells

The Invisible Man book is about a character named Griffin, a scientist who turns himself invisible. Griffin uses his invisibility powers and makes the most out of it by making bad choices, even as far as conducting murder. The main characters of the story are Griffin, Thomas Marvel, his helper, and Doctor Hemp, and College friend. The plot of the story begins when he arrives at a hotel and stays there for several months using his invisibility to commit burglary at night. Griffin and Thomas almost get caught and arrested and decide to go their separate ways. Griffin goes to Dr.Hemps house and asks if he can stay there. However his consequences soon lead up to with him in the end.

I really enjoyed reading the book because there was so much suspense and tension. One of my favorite characters was Doctor Hemp. This is because he helped Griffin by giving him a place to stay and stayed true to himself and did not join Griffin in what he does. One part about the book that really surprised me was when Griffin realized he needed more money and stole from his father leading to his father making a gut wrenching decision. The part about the book that I disliked was that Marvel only made bad decisions with Griffin for the money and used it to his advantage. So in a way he was only with Griffin to get more money as well as not caring of the crimes they committed.

I would recommend this book to anyone who likes suspense and horror. I would also recommend it because it was full of surprises and many jaw dropping moments. This includes many of the times he would conduct experiments in the hotel. I think people who enjoy fear, suspense, and science would definitely enjoy this book. This book reminds of Metamorphosis because they have similar situations as Griffin that include life and death.
